Leidig turns over commands at Nisida ceremony

Rear Adm. Joe Leidig turned over command to Rear Adm. John Richardson July 22 during a ceremony at Nisida, a small island near Naples, Italy.

Richardson takes on four titles from Leidig: Director, U.S. Naval Forces Europe-U.S. Naval Forces Africa, Operations and Intelligence; Deputy Commander, U.S. Sixth Fleet; Commander Submarines, Allied Naval Forces South; and Commander, Submarine Group Eight.

"I am very excited to be part of this stellar team in Europe and Africa," said Richardson. "It is clear to me that we are ready for any challenge and opportunity. I am honored to be serving with you and excited to get started."

Leidig assumed the four titles May 4, 2007. The 1978 Naval Academy graduate in Mathematics also earned a master's degree in National Security and Strategic Studies from the Naval War College in 1994. Leidig's next assignment will be as Chief of Staff, J5, Joint Staff.

"The journey over the past two years has been incredible. Today, the pace of operations is high and we have blazed many trails," said Leidig. "Thank you to all the Sailors and Civilians in these great commands, they are amazing professionals. Never in my career have I been more proud to be part of such a great team."

Richardson comes to Naples from U.S. Joint Forces Command as the Director of Strategy and Policy. He is a 1982 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and holds master's degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the National War College.

Local teen sets recycling example for all to follow

Story and photos by:

Mass Communications Specialist First Class (NAO)

John Parker NSA Naples Assistant PAO

Anyone who has walked by the recycle bins at the Support Site has probably seen plastic bottles spilling out, bags ripped open and trash scattered everywhere. Most people usually think someone else will clean it up. Well, there is someone who is doing just that, her name is Taylor Reardon, and she is a fourteen-year-old high school student living on the Support Site. This young lady is making a huge difference as well as teaching some younger kids some important lessons in life.

It all began while Reardon was babysitting for the Smith family, watching six-year-old Maddox, seven-year-old Adia and eight-year-old Aidan. The kids were each given chores by their mother, and they were to finish those chores while Reardon watched them. Being a very innovative teen, she decided since their chores involved taking out the trash and the recycling, she would use this time to teach these youngsters about cleaning up their environment.

"I said, 'let's play a game,'" said Taylor. "Whoever picks up the most recycling that is just lying around the bin would get a prize."

So she handed out a couple of trash bags and they went to work. Just the thought of picking up used plastic bottles, dirty cans and wet cardboard boxes would turn most people away, but not this teen and not these kids.

"I always cared about the environment ever since I was little, said Taylor. "My parents told me that we had to take care of the places [where] we work, live and play."

Legal Corner

By Lt. Chris Jeter
NSA Naples Staff Judge Advocate

Greetings from the Staff Judge Advocate's office!
My name is Lt. Chris Jeter, and I am the staff judge advocate for U.S. Naval Support Activity, Naples, Italy. There are three important issues that I would like to bring to your attention. Please pass this information along to new and incoming personnel.

First, what exactly is legal? People use that term a lot when referring to a host of different functions. The Region Legal Service Office (RLSO) provides legal advice and prosecution services to area commands. It also is the point of contact for powers of attorney, wills, sojourner permits, family law and consumer advice, and a host of other issues personal to Sailors. The Naval Legal Service Office (NLSO) provides defense services to Sailors who are being investigated, prosecuted, or processed for separation. Both offices are located on the first floor of Admin II. Feel free to call or stop by for an appointment.

Next, I'd like to discuss sojourner permits. Lately, we have had some personnel neglecting to obtain sojourner permits, or allowing those permits to expire while residing here in Italy. Active duty members are exempt from visa requirements and can move about Europe with their military ID (though for security reasons I suggest using a personal passport when on personal travel). All military dependents, members of a civilian component, and their dependents, regardless of age, are required to apply for a sojourner permit within eight days of arrival in Italy. The Sojourner Permit is the Italian government document that certifies an individual to be a temporary legal resident of Italy. Upon arrival, you must immediately apply for the permit during Area Orientation or independently at the Region Legal Service Office, Europe and Southwest Asia (RLSO EUR-SWA). The RLSO is prepared to assist you with the application process and to pick up your completed permit from the local police. While commuting in the local area, you should always carry a photocopy of your Military ID or sojourner permit.

Finally, let's talk fundraising. Like many of you, I've certainly bought my fair-share of spicy chili bowls with cornbread, two-for-one hamburgers and hotdogs, and early morning breakfast burritos. And just like you, I sure do appreciate the added variety in meal options, at a low price, that fundraisers provide. Nevertheless, it is my responsibility to make sure that individuals are not getting sick, that customers are not being exploited, and that the NEX and Commissary aren't being run out of business. As such, NSA Instruction dictates that all fundraising activities of any kind (including bagging at the NEX) performed on any NSA Naples installation be granted prior approval by the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. Only NSA Naples approved private organizations are permitted to fundraise anywhere on any NSA Naples location; that means that if an organization has not received NSA-command recognition from my office, then that organization is not permitted to do any form of fundraising in any NSA Naples spaces. If you have questions regarding fundraising on the base, or obtaining NSA-command recognition for your organization, my office is happy to help. Please call 081-568-5360 or stop by the office during our walk-in hours, daily from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 1-2 p.m.

Environmental Management System internal audit to be conducted

The NSA Naples Public Works Environmental Division will be conducting an internal audit, July 28 through Aug. 6, of its Environmental Management System (EMS). The purpose of this audit is for the environmental team to evaluate how well EMS is functioning and to look for ways to improve. As a reminder, June 12 NSA Naples Commanding Officer Robert B. Rabuse signed the self-declaration for NSA Naples which stated that the management system, consistent with International for Standard of Organization (ISO) 14001, had been implemented basewide.

EMS Program Manager, Sofia Meles, with the help of Installation Environmental Program Manager JP Beaudouin and Physical Scientist Elizabeth Barr, will conduct the audit by visiting areas within Capodichino, the Support Site, Carney Park and Gaeta. Their hope is to find everyone is aware of the NSA Naples Environmental policy and work is being conducted to meet the four EMS goals for the base. During the site visits the environmental team will be looking for ways to enhance performance toward meeting the EMS goals, and should the need arise, may conduct on-the-spot training or provide environmental handouts. The following are things that should be done to get ready for next weeks audit:

Be aware of the NSA Naples Environmental Policy signed by Rabuse in Sept. 2008 which commits everyone to implementing EMS. The NSA Naples Environmental Policy can be found at <http://www.cnic.navy.mil/Naples/programs/departments/environmentalsupport/index.htm>.

- Know the four main environmental goals for the base:
 - reduction of hazardous waste,
 - prevention of spills of hazardous materials,
 - conservation of energy and water usage, and
 - reduction of solid waste.
- Understand how activities can help meet the goals for the base.

The Environmental Division is looking to recognize the top performers – please get ready by becoming familiar with environmental responsibilities. For more information about the audit, contact Meles at 081-568-6640.

Protestant Women of the Chapel hosts Family Game Night

Last chance to enter the Navy's suicide prevention poster contest

In order to garner support from all hands in preventing suicides, the Navy is sponsoring a suicide prevention poster contest. Contest entries will be accepted through today. The winning posters will be published in the Nov. 2009 issue of All Hands Magazine. Individual and team submissions are welcome. Service members can vote online to choose the winner.

At the core of Navy's suicide prevention effort is the desire for Sailors to ACT (Ask, Care, Treat). Ask if someone is thinking about suicide, let them know you care, and get them assistance (treatment) as soon as possible. Accordingly, the suicide prevention poster should be designed to inspire viewers to be aware of suicide; to take positive action; to have hope; to give help a chance; and, most importantly, that life counts - live it.

For contest details, go to <http://www.suicide.navy.mil>.

Milan first to ban underage drinking, purchasing of alcohol

An Italian law prohibits serving alcohol to minors under the age of 16 but there is no legal age limit to buy alcohol. On Monday, Milan became the first city in Italy to ban minors from buying or consuming alcohol due to their drinking and public drunkenness problem. Shopkeepers will be fined if they are caught selling alcohol to minors under the new ordinance issued by Mayor Letizia Moratti. Parents of minors caught drinking alcohol will have to paying a €500 ticket. Bar owners agreed with the ban but were not very convinced that the ban would prevent drinking. Minors might ask older people to buy drinks and it could be difficult to control. The Sicilian town of Caltagirone announced shopkeepers will be fined up to €250 if they sell alcohol to minors but it will not fine parents. Other cities are considering the ban. According to the health department, 20 percent of Italian youths between the ages of 11 and 15 are at risk of alcohol abuse.

Chefs of world leaders tour Italy

Italy hosted private chefs of the president, prime ministers and monarch's this year. Twenty-five members of the Club de Chefs des Chefs will travel around Italy to eat, and learn the authentic taste of Italian cuisine to serve to world leaders. The hosts of this event were two head chefs of Italian President Giorgio Napolitano. The President's special dish is a simple "spaghetti al pomodoro" made by dropping fresh tomatoes in boiling water for ten seconds and transferring them to a dish of water and ice to stop them cooking further. Once peeled and deseeded the pulp is fried in extra virgin olive oil with garlic, basil and no salt. Next year the Club de Chefs des Chefs will meet in Hong Kong.

Italy's milk prices rise due to summer heat

Italian farmers decided to install fans and cold showers to keep their dairy cattle cool due to high temperatures causing cows to produce less milk. The perfect temperatures for cows are 22 or 24 degrees.

The farmer's organization Coldiretti said the situation is worse in the areas where the climate is hot and humid. The Italian farmers are dealing with the biggest milk price crisis in the last 20 years. Farmers took advantage of regional government subsidies to install the cooling systems but are faced with increased energy and water bills.

Nun caught speeding in Turin

Traffic police pulled over and fined a 56-year-old nun who was driving at 112 mph per hour in Turin. She was accompanied by two other nuns who all claimed they needed to be near the pope after he lost his balance in his bathroom and broke his wrist. He went under surgery and blessed with his right wrist in a cast. The police officer told her she was going 30 mph over the limit, suspended her driver's license for a month and issued her a €375 ticket.

11-year-old swims Messina Strait in Sicily

An 11-year-old Italian girl swam across the Messina Strait in Sicily in 40 minutes, 33 second. The 3.5 km stretch of water separates Sicily from the Italian mainland. The girl is from the Sicilian town of Milazzo and she has been swimming since she was six years old. The youngest person to swim the strait was a Sicilian 10-year-old boy who did it in 55 minutes, 30 seconds in 2006. The first swim of the Messina Strait took place in 1930 and since then it has been a regular open-water swimmers challenge even to people with illnesses. In 2007, it was crossed by a man with double bypass and by a single leg Neapolitan man who swam it in one and a half hours.

While most teens are at the pool or hanging out with friends, this fourteen-year-old is spending her summer working and teaching the younger generation to take care of their planet and have fun while doing it. Tim O'Connell the facilities director for housing was one of the many people on base who was very impressed with these children.

"I think it is really important for the children and teens to get involved, said O'Connell. "It teaches them respect for the environment and most importantly respect for our homes and the places where we live and work. The most important reason for all of us to help work on this is because there is no one else to do it. It's our responsibility to keep our locations clean."

When Reardon was asked why she decided to get out there and start this project on her own she said, "I believe that the base should be a clean and safe place for all of us to live and play."

For more information about recycling at the Support Site contact O'Connell at 081-811-4431.

Vacation Bible School registration in full swing

Susan Boggs, Panorama volunteer

Registration opened June 8 for Vacation Bible School (VBS) which runs August 10-14 at the NSA Naples Chapel. The chapel decided to try something new this year "evening VBS" 5-8 p.m. VBS will offer Bible study, fellowship, crafts, music and games. For volunteers with infants or children up to age four, there will be a nursery and preschool room available.

VBS is for children Kindergarten – 6th-grade. This year the program has a safari theme for every age group and every day.

"We begin with an opening assembly to gather everyone together and to get everyone excited about the Lord's Prayer. After the assembly, all of the children will spend 20 minutes in five different stations; Bible story, arts and crafts, hospitality, music and recreation. Because we are having an evening VBS, we will be serving a dinner for all participants. This should make it easier for all the volunteers as well as the children who are coming. No one will need to worry about fixing a meal," said Cindy Wills VBS director.

The idea to have VBS at night was brought to the attention of the NSA Naples Chapel when volunteers were unable to participate because of busy work schedules and conflicting children's activities during the day. Now parents can get off work and take their children to VBS without their children missing Camp Adventure or other activities. Having parents involved is very important to VBS because the program is run almost completely by volunteers and the chapel staff.

"It helps because now more of our men are available to participate. We have many boys that attend VBS and having that male role model is good for both the boys and the girls. Plus it helps that the entire family can be involved in the evening together," Wills stated.

Sandra Polk NSA Naples Chapel PDRE has seen a lot of positive feedback from parents who can now volunteer this year when in the past they couldn't fit it into their busy schedules.

Polk said, "Many parents are very glad to have VBS in the evenings because both parents can volunteer and help out with cooking or teaching with out missing work."

Parents, such as Nicole Sasek, like the idea of evening VBS because she can volunteer after work and her three children can attend Bible study without missing Camp Adventure or preschool at the CDC.

"Kids who normally have swimming lessons or other activities can attend VBS without missing out on their normal daily schedules," said Sasek.

To register children or volunteering for VBS contact the NSA Naples Chapel Office for an application at 081-811-4600.

New DoD spouse tuition assistance program available for spouses of active duty personnel

Story by MC2 (SW) Michael Campbell, NPASE-E Det. Europe

Spouses of active duty and active reserve service members now have the opportunity to take advantage of a new tuition assistance program. The Department of Defense Military Spouse Career Advancement Account (MyCAA) program is a two-year $6,000 grant for spouses interested in pursuing a “portable career.”

“A portable career field is a degree that is not considered a specialty and can be applied to different job fields,” said Micah Sharp, education counselor for the Navy College Office at Naval Support Activity Naples, Capodichino installation.

Examples of degrees for a portable career field are business management, education and health services among many others. These degrees can be applied to multiple job fields and qualify to be covered under MyCAA.

“One of the things that separates this program from others is the fact that it is not needs based,” said Sharp. “As long as the spouse’s husband or wife is active duty and are interested in a portable career field, they will qualify for the program.”

Spouses can apply for MyCAA by visiting the Military OneSource Web site at <http://www.militaryonesource.com>. Once the spouse has applied, they should call the Military OneSource Career and Education Consultants at 1-800-342-9647. Eligible spouses receive up to $3,000 a year for two years with the spouse tuition assistance. The money can be applied towards tuition and lab fees directly related to the course. Another benefit of the program is the fact that spouses can use the money in conjunction with other programs such as Pell Grants, scholarships and student loans.

According to Autumn Tate, a military spouse, the program not only benefits spouses, but also the entire military family.

“By educating the spouses and providing them with the tools to pursue higher paying jobs, the program helps increase the household income of service members and reduces a lot of the stress service members go through,” said Tate.

Whether it is for a spouse’s first college level class or to help finance a post-graduate program, MyCAA supplies financing to cover some of the expenses incurred while pursuing higher education. To apply for the MyCAA program, visit <https://airportal.acc.af.mil/mycaa> or for more information, visit the Navy College Office at Capodichino.

Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society helps families save money

The Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society (NMCRS) helps active duty service members and their families with financial emergencies, such as emergency travel, car repairs, rent and other emergencies. The NMCRS is also involved in helping to educate the military community with budgeting and preparing to be new parents in its Budget-4-Baby budgeting class, and its Visiting Nurse Program.

The Naples NMCRS also has a program, Clip & Save, that very few people are aware of which is helping the community save money at the NSA Naples Commissary. Throughout the month volunteers go through boxes of coupons they receive from volunteers in nursing homes, special wives groups, and other organizations wanting to help the military save money by clipping the coupons for the organization. The NMCRS Chairman of the Clip & Save Program, HM2 Prayuth “Joe” Komenkul and his wife Suerjee Lee help run the program. They sort through thousands of coupons, clean out the coupon bins at the Commissary and put out the store coupons on the aisles for special items.

According to Gaetano Tizzano, the customer service manager for the Naples NSA Commissary, the total coupons savings from Jan. 1 through June 30 was $51,000, or approximately $8,500 per month the military community saved by using coupons to help cut costs on their food bill.

For more information on the Naples NMCRS Clip & Save Program, or any of their other programs, assistance, or to volunteer, contact Naples NMCRS at 081-548-3913.

Animals without Limits’ president takes care of Naples’ strays

By Vania Lamanna, volunteer for the Animals without Limits

Mia Mattsson-Mercer, president and founder of Animals without Limits (AWL), starts her day at 5 a.m. taking care of the 13 dogs she currently has in her home which consists of feeding, cleaning up after and letting them outside. After taking care of her two children and husband and making sure all their needs are met, her day continues mainly outdoors, driving around the streets and fields of Naples, keeping an eye out for sick and needy animals who may have been ill-treated/tortured, abandoned or both and giving them food, love, and medical attention-along with the help of a vet with whom she works.

Mattson-Mercer also organizes shelter clean ups, gathers volunteers to go to needy shelters, washes kennels, grooms and administers much needed TLC to the dogs. She writes books, attends conferences, gives speeches, receives phone calls at all hours of the day or night from people asking for her help with strays they have found and picked up. She tries to find a caring home for the strays, be it permanent or foster. She does all this along with working at Centro Laila.

AWL is organizing a Food Drive and is desperately in need of dog food to help a shelter with 500 dogs. They are also always in need of donations, medicines, leashes, food, old blankets, towels and volunteers for dog-walking. To make a donation, to volunteer or for the location to drop off donations, contact Mattson-Mercer at 346-151-2044.

Navy provides update for Senior Enlisted Continuation Board

By Chief MC (SW) Maria Yager, Naval Personnel Command Public Affairs

A Navy message released July 21 provides further details on the upcoming Senior Enlisted Continuation Board.

While not all-inclusive, NAVADMIN 211/09 lists some factors that indicate to those Sailors before the continuation board what the board is using as a measurement standard for continuation.

Those factors include documented misconduct and substandard performance including “significant problems” or “progressing” promotion recommendations, declining performance from the same reporting senior, failure to maintain physical fitness assessment standards, military or civilian convictions and non-judicial punishment and documented administrative or personnel action for misconduct, such as DUI/DWI, spouse or child abuse.

Additionally, the message directs commands to continue to verify the status of their eligible Sailors until the Sept. 1 cut-off date. Changes in the eligibility pool will continue to occur as a result of selection boards, execution of overseas permanent change of stations orders and other factors.

Announced in January by NAVADMIN 030/009, the fiscal year (FY) 2010 E7-E9 Senior Enlisted Continuation Board convenes Sept. 21 at Navy Personnel Command. Members not selected for continuation will transfer to the fleet reserve or retire no later than June 30, 2010.

This year’s continuation board will review the records of approximately 5,500 active-duty and full time support E7 through E9 personnel.

The performance-driven review of master chiefs, senior chiefs and chiefs with more than 20 years of service and three years time-in-grade will be similar to the continuation boards already in place for officers.

Exemptions to the FY-10 Senior Enlisted Continuation Board include Sailors with approved fleet reserve/retirement dates effective on or before June 30, 2010, those selected for advancement by the FY-10 senior and master chief boards, personnel selected for command senior chief/master chief by the FY-10 board, Safe Harbor participants and personnel with orders to or serving in the first two years of an overseas DoD area tour at the time of the board convening date. DoD area tours in the United States and District of Columbia are not exempt.

Additionally, personnel holding a nuclear, SEAL (special warfare boat operator, special warfare operator), explosive ordnance disposal technician or diver enlisted classification code, plus fleet, force and command master chiefs are exempt from the board.

Each eligible member is responsible for ensuring their record is correct and up-to-date with evaluations, awards and other appropriate information. Candidates may communicate with the continuation board by submitting a board package. Selection board packages provide candidates the opportunity to submit missing documents from the sections of their records that are viewed by the continuation board. Packages must be post marked no later than Aug. 17, 2009. Packages submitted to the E8 and E9 advancement selection boards will not be presented to the continuation board. Further guidance on submitting a board package can be found in NAVADMIN 096/09.

A list of personnel selected for continuation will be released in November. Commanding officers with personnel not selected for continuation will be notified so they may personally and confidentially notify the members.

More information is available in NAVADMIN 211/09, which should be read in conjunction with NAVADMIN 030/09 and 096/09 available at <http://www.npc.navy.mil/CareerInfo/ForceStabilization/>.

PRACTICE ELECTRICAL SAFETY

Provided by NSA Naples Safety Department

Electrical energy helps to make the world more comfortable and convenient. Electricity is taken for granted, because it does so many things easily and dependably. Home electrical systems provide energy to heat, cool, cook, drive power tools, and perform other useful functions. However, this energy can start fires, cause electrical shock, or kill. The more one understands about electricity, the safer they will be.

Some things besides wires and cables can conduct electricity. For instance, metal is a good conductor and must be insulated to keep electricity from leaking or spilling over as it travels.

Sometimes insulation breaks down due to wear, rough use, or because of aging. When this happens, anyone contacting the conductor may get shocked. Shock happens when electrical current leaks through insulation and passes through the body to the ground. Any shock is dangerous to a person’s body, and the seriousness of the shock depends on the contact between the leaking current and the ground. Wet hands or standing in water often causes a stronger shock and possible serious injury or death.

Normally, the human body is a very good conductor of electricity. If a “tingle” from an electrical source is felt, consider it a warning of pending danger. Immediately disconnect the equipment involved until it has been checked by an expert, repaired, or replaced.

Death from electrical shock usually results from a disruption in the rhythmic beating of the heart. In very high voltage shock, death can result. Cramping of chest muscles causes breathing to stop. Most shock deaths occur when electricity flows through the body, by way of the chest, to the earth or grounded metal object.

Aside from the physical separation of electrical conductors and/or insulation, residential electrical service may include Ground Fault Circuit Interrupters (GFCIs). A GFCI constantly monitors current flowing in a circuit to sense any loss of current. If the current flowing in a circuit through two circuit conductors differs by a very small amount, the GFCI instantly interrupts the current flow to prevent a lethal amount of electricity from reaching the person. The person may feel a painful shock, but will not be electrocuted.

Double-insulated appliances do not need to be grounded and offer approximately the same protection as grounded appliances. Double insulation is a design and manufacturing method that assures no exterior, exposed part of an appliance can become electrically “HOT.”

To keep electrically safe, do not alter or bypass safety devices, and strictly follow the latest codes when making changes in house wiring. Make sure that the work done by anyone, including an electrician, meets local codes or the National Electrical Code of the National Fire Protection Association. Occasionally test ground-fault circuit interrupters to check for proper operation based upon manufactures specifications.

Electrical cords are a primary cause of home fires. The most common factors are cracked or broken plugs, frayed or exposed insulation, and overloads from accommodating too many appliances. Never place an extension cord under a rug. Insulation wear may occur which is hidden under the rug and combustible carpet material could ignite. Knotting or twisting cords may break the wire or insulation. Cords should not contact a steam pipe, appliance, or any other object that becomes hot, since the insulation may become scorched and may crack. Frequently inspect cords for worn places or any signs of defect. Replace any defective cords. Never use extension cords in place of permanent wiring. Do not put them through holes in walls, ceiling, or floors. Never run extension cords through doorways or windows.

Keep all electrical appliances out of the bathroom. If electrical appliances must be used in the bathroom, place them where they cannot be reached from the tub and where they will not fall into a tub, lavatory, toilet, or shower. Do not use appliances when they are damp, unless they are designed for such purposes. A person who is damp should not operate appliances.

NSA Naples energy conservation

By UT1 (SCW) Paul J. Kuntz, NSA Naples Energy Manager

Consider trading in that old gas or electric mower for a manual push mower. Reap the benefits of no gas/electrical cost, a lawn that is cut rather than ripped, a better grade of mulch, a starting cost of only about $100, no noise or CO2 pollution and no high maintenance costs.

Naples Health Awareness Update

Beach closure update

By Daniela Muto, CNREURAFSWA Public Affairs

Many readers during the past week or two have asked whether it is safe to bathe in Campania coastal waters, following the latest news reports about bacteriological sea water contamination in the Naples area. The following is a list of Web site links that provide official information on coastal water monitoring data and a map outlining the safe or the banned portions of coastline (related or unrelated to pollution) released by the regional Environmental Protection Agency (ARPAC), Campania Region and Italy Ministry of Health:

<http://www.arpacampania.it/baln2009web/balneazione.pdf>

http://www.arpacampania.it/at_cont_sezione.asp?id_sez=4&pag=12

<http://www.ministerosalute.it/balneazione/risultatoRegione.jsp?CodReg=150>

ARPAC conducts biweekly monitoring of regional waters and publishes updated data on its Web site. According to ARPAC's latest results, bathing is safe in most areas of the Flegrean coastline, local islands, Sorrento, Amalfi and Cilento coasts.

Campania region's 2009 bulletin of the off-limits traits of coastline outlines the “historically” contaminated sites from Portici to Castellammare di Stabia; from Bagnoli to Pozzuoli's port; from Cuma to Licola in Naples Province; from Castelvolturno to Sessa Aurunca in Caserta Province; and Pontecagnano and harbor locations in Salerno Province.

Take precautions during current heat wave

Meteorologists and Italian civil protection authorities predict the current hot weather pattern in Southern Italy and the islands will peak this weekend with temperatures surpassing 102 degrees Fahrenheit (40° C). As always, be especially attentive to children, the elderly and pets. Make sure they stay cool and have plenty of water.

As always, personnel are reminded to contact the USNH Naples Environmental Health Information Center at 081-811-6071 with personal environmental health questions.

USS Arleigh Burke (DDG 51) made its second South African port call, Saturday, to Simon's Town after a week-long series of at-sea exercises with South Africa corvette SAS Amatola (F 145).

The two ships conducted a range of cooperative activities geared to enhance maritime interoperability between the two partner nations. Additionally, each ship hosted several of the other ship's Sailors for a chance to ride a foreign navy ship.

"This last week has been extremely beneficial to our navies as well as our Sailors," said Capt. Jim Tranoris, commander, Task Force 363. "We have had the unique experience to refine our skill sets at sea with the South Africans, bringing us to a higher level of maritime awareness and interoperability. I am proud of both our nations' Sailors for the work they've accomplished and the new relationships that have been forged."

Exercises such as maneuvering drills, flashing light communications and small boat operations were some of the various activities carried out between the two ships.

"I really like the way they train here. I've learned a lot," said South Africa Navy Sub Lt. Zanele Madiba, a ship rider aboard Arleigh Burke. "I think riding a foreign navy's ship is a good idea to simply gain understanding. Everyone needs to understand other cultures and deal with different types of people. Especially if you're in a leadership position, you need to understand how others think and operate."

An additional range of ashore and at-sea cooperative activities are scheduled in the coming week between the two nations' navies.

Gates calls for increase of 22,000 soldiers

By John J. Kruzel, American Forces Press Service

Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates announced Monday plans to add up to 22,000 soldiers to the U.S. Army's ranks.

The plus-up of active duty troops will take the Army from 547,000 to 569,000 forces in what Gates characterized as a temporary increase of the Army's "end strength" for three fiscal years.

"This is an important and necessary step to ensure that we continue to properly support the needs of our commanders in the field while providing relief for our current force and their families," the secretary told reporters during a Pentagon news conference.

Gates pointed to escalating violence in Afghanistan and an added U.S. presence there, political turmoil in Pakistan and elimination of the so-called "stop-loss" policy of involuntarily extending a soldier's length of service as reasons behind the decision.

"The cumulative effect of these factors is that the Army faces a period where its ability to continue to deploy combat units at acceptable 'fill rates' is at risk," he said. "Based on current deployment estimates, this is a temporary challenge which will peak in the coming year and abate over the course of the next three years."

Some 130,000 American forces are in Iraq and 58,000 are in Afghanistan, where an influx of deploying troops will bring the number to 68,000 by the end of this year, defense officials said.

"These additional forces will be used to ensure that our deploying units are properly manned, and not to create new combat formations," the defense secretary said, adding that the decision was made after consulting with the Army's top military and civilian leadership and with the backing of President Barack Obama.

Gates, who has described the defense budget as "zero sum," said the cost of the Army increase would be absorbed in funding already allocated in the budget for the next two fiscal years.

"We will take that money from someplace that isn't as high a priority as [adding] more soldiers and taking some additional steps to relieve the stress on the force," he said. "This is a very high priority."

Navy Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, appeared alongside Gates Monday, and also weighed in on the decision.

"I've grown increasingly concerned over the last year and a half about stress on the force and our ability to meet the demands out there," he said. "This temporary increase helps us address that concern. It will also help us get a better handle on [time at home between deployments] and boost the number of people we can deploy with the capabilities our commanders most need."

Diversity outreach full speed ahead in today's Navy

From Chief of Naval Personnel Public Affairs

The Navy's Diversity Outreach Program, a chief of naval operations (CNO) priority to increase Navy awareness and outreach to a diverse recruiting demographic, is discussed by the chief of naval personnel (CNP) in his most recent podcast, released July 17.

Diversity outreach is an effort that has been underway for years, said Vice Adm. Mark Ferguson, CNP.

Per CNO's guidance, when the nation looks at its Navy, it should see itself reflected back, and America's workforce is changing.

"Seventy percent of new workers entering the workforce are women and minorities. That is a market that we have to tap into, to make a stronger Navy," said Ferguson.

However, the Navy does not define 'diverse' solely by gender or ethnic backgrounds.

"We value diversity of opinion, diversity of background, diversity of culture and experience, and we feel that diversity makes a stronger Navy because it represents all parts of the country," said Ferguson.

The Diversity Outreach Program is executed in two stages - awareness and outreach. To raise awareness, the Navy has posted diversity counselors in several cities throughout the country where the Navy has a small footprint, in order to expand its exposure base.

"In order to sustain a technically advanced 21st century Navy, we must reach out to all parts of our country to attract and recruit the best," said Ferguson.

"What we have found is that people don't say 'No,' N-O, to the Navy, they don't know, K-N-O-W, what the Navy has to offer."

JFC NCOs join elite athletes in an Ironman Competition

By Staff Sgt. Hillary Stonemetz, USA AF, JFC Public Affairs

Two U.S. Air Force non-commissioned officers assigned to Joint Force Command Naples competed July 5 in the Ironman Competition in Klagenfurt, Austria. The Ironman Competition is one of the toughest and most elite triathlon in the world comprised of a 2.4 mile swim, 112 mile bike race, and concludes with a 26.2 mile marathon.

Master Sgt. Kevin LaBrie, Joint Mobile Training Team coordinator and Staff Sgt. Jessica Pigott, Travel Management Office technician trained up to 22 hours a week during their 30 week program to prepare for the Ironman Competition.

"We swam three times a week and ran and biked four times a week," said LaBrie. "We incorporated brick workouts and include riding the bike then running immediately afterwards. This gets your body used to transitioning from the bike to the run in the race."

After a lot of hard work and determination, the team travelled to Austria to compete in their first Ironman Competition. The first stage of the race was the 2.4 mile swim.

"There were 2,500 competitors," said Pigott. "Kevin and I had planned to stay together for the whole swim since our swim times were the same during training. But during the competition, there were so many people pushing, pulling and kicking, it was impossible."

After each stage of the race, competitors advance to a transition area to prepare for the next stage of the competition. Each stage of the competition has cut-off times. The deadline to finish the entire competition is 17 hours.

The bike portion of the competition immediately followed the swim and was composed of two laps around the entire course.

"There were a ton of hills," said Pigott. "The second lap felt a lot longer than the first." The final stage of the competition was the marathon.

"If you can train for a marathon, you can train for the Ironman," said LaBrie. "You don't have to be a world-class athlete to finish the Ironman. It's not impossible, it's all mental."

LaBrie's times were as follows:

Swim:	1 hour, 22 minutes
Bike:	5 hours, 51 minutes
Marathon:	4 hours, 2 minutes
Finish time:	11 hours, 33 minutes

Pigott's times were as follows:

Swim:	1 hour, 23 minutes
Bike:	7 hours, 42 minutes
Marathon:	4 hours, 30 minutes
Finish time:	14 hours, 6 minutes
